

Project Safety Switch report released

The report into the state of safety in Australian homes will be officially launched in the coming weeks.

The report containing 16 recommendations will be used to drive the Project Safety Switch campaign encouraging state and federal governments, industry and the general public to switch thinking.

Master Electricians will be spearheading the national campaign for mandatory safety switches to be installed on every circuit, in every Australian home by 2016.

The ambitious goal will see an additional 30 million safety switches fitted in the next five years.

The report – Switch Thinking – Preventing Electrical Deaths in Australian Homes will be available on the Master Electricians website soon.
